Several of the leading lithographic printing establishments in San Francisco including H. S. Crocker & Co., the Dickman-Jones Co. and the Schmidt Label Co. have pooled their interests by forming a trust. This applies only to the lithographic branches of the respective firms. The intention of the trust is to ultimately occupy one building but pending the expiring of the present individual leases no more will be at present made in that direction. Eastern and local competition of the keenest kind has forced this step. The trade generally is in a bad way on the coast and artists and color workers look askance at the probably curtailment of business under the new regime.
